There is scarce a day, that disna bring us news of some fresh outrage upon the liberties of Scotland, some new defection, or some bluidy murder o the Lords persecuted flock. u Ay, my son, these are the times that try mens souls;--And let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall. Ah, Allan, you are still with us, said Andrew, pressing his friends hand. Yes, Andrew, I am still waiting in almost hourly expectation of my summons; but my wanderings are not yet over, though when I heard your approach, I thought it might be they were. Andrew, said William Atchison, have ye seen ony o my friends lately Can ye give me some news o my auld father, an o my wife an bairns You here too, William! said Andrew, I am glad to see ye, an I wad be blythe to bring ye news o your dear ones, but I haena seen them for more than a fortnight. An how was my father then, Andrew Puir auld man! I thought the last time I ventured hame, he seemed to be failing fast. I think, mysel, he is drawing near his hame, replied Andrew; but William, dinna grieve, ye ken the righteous is taken away frae the evil to come, an nane o us has sae much comfort in these days, that we should wish to cleave to this world....
