Fast forward three years and Mar is now 15-years old. Because Mar had blocked out her dad's death, she's never really admitted to herself that he's gone forever, let alone acknowledged or visited his gravesite. She suddenly decides to take a 14-hour journey on a Greyhound bus to finally visit her dad's grave and to face the truth: that her dad is really gone. Will Mar finally get the closure she so desperately seeks? This is a touching short story about grief, loss, acceptance and forgiveness. It's about the comfort of a gifted Christmas angel. It's about the miracle of healing and unconditional love.
