Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online. Chronic stress is the response to emotional pressure suffered for a prolonged period over which an individual perceives he or she has no control. It involves an endocrine system response in which occurs a release of corticosteroids. If this continues for a long time, it can cause damage to an individual s physical and mental health. Animals exposed to distressing events over which they have no control respond by releasing of corticosteroids. These, if prolonged, lead to structural changes in their brains.
