Excerpt: . . . purchaser of the note, and that the defenses interposed thereto are unavailing, even an innocent purchaser of commercial paper can only recover the actual amount paid out by him, with interest, when it appears that the maker of the note has a valid defense as against the payee. In examining this question the first inquiry that arises is in respect of the power of the defendant corporation to execute the note in question, The provisions of the charter of the Chapman-White Lyons Company, conferring on it power to issue negotiable paper, are as follows: (7) To borrow money and issue notes or bonds upon the faith of the corporate property, etc. It is also authorized to deal in merchandise in as full and ample a manner as is now allowed by law to individuals. Article 4 of section 1 of the by-laws authorizes the president to sign contracts for the company, and only requires the attestation of the secretary to such documents as require the corporate seal, and then only when necessary. Section 2 of article 4 provides that the vice president and general manager shall perform the duties of the president in the absence or disability of the president. Now, it will be observed that under its act of incorporation the defendant, Chapman-White-Lyons Company, is expressly authorized to issue notes or bonds, and in the present instance the note was executed by the vice president of the company, who, under its bylaws, is vested...
