Excerpt: .alone and unattended, and there God Himself buried him in a secret sepulchre, which no man has ever yet discovered. His age at death was one hundred and twenty years, and, like Aaron his brother, he received a public mourning, which lasted during thirty days.--Deut. i.-xxxiv. We have said that Moses beheld the land in the spirit This was upon the mountain of transfiguration, for there he appeared in glory, together with Elijah and our blessed Lord. And hence we see that, although God thought fit to exact punishment from His servant, yet his punishment was mingled with mercy, and his glorified spirit was admitted to the land from which his body was righteously excluded. The first five books of the Bible have been universally attributed to Moses as their author, with the exception, of course, of the last chapter of Deuteronomy. They form the foundation of the Jewish law, and are generally called the His Death. Ill Pentateuch, or five volumes. And whether we consider their author as a writer, or as a legislator, or as a type of our Lord Jesus Christ, or as one of the prophets, we must feel that few greater men than Moses have ever lived. His name is still revered, and his institutions more or less respected and observed, by millions of the human race; and he was the man chosen by God to set forth that law, whose peculiar office was to prepare the way for...
