I See thee standing near, oh! bright-eyed one, I gather strength to run the life-long race; Around thy brow I see the light of dawn, And love triumphant in thy radiant face. And thou wert with me in the early years, I followed thee through many pathways wild, And worshipped thee, and had nor doubts nor fears, But all the strong faith of a simple child. From early morn, till noon, and twilight grey, And when the, solemn stars looked down on night, In midnight visions, waking dreams by day, I walked illumined by thy mystic light. And in that early day the world was new, All wisdom dwelt, my father, then with thee; Oh simple faith! oh simple faith and true! The shrine at which I knelt--a mother s knee. Her gentle voice and eyes, angelic, mild, Still follow me through...
